The Last Lecture Randy Pausch 2008-04-08 After being diagnosed with terminal cancer, a professor shares the lessons he's learned—about living in the present, building a legacy, and taking full advantage of the time you have—in this life-changing classic. "We cannot change the cards we are dealt, just how we play the hand." —Randy Pausch A lot of professors give talks titled "The Last Lecture." Professors are asked to consider their demise and to ruminate on what matters most to them. And while they speak, audiences can't help but mull over the same question: What wisdom would we impart to the world if we knew it was our last chance? If we had to vanish tomorrow, what would we want as our legacy? When Randy Pausch, a computer science professor at Carnegie Mellon, was asked to give such a lecture, he didn't have to imagine it as his last, since he had recently been diagnosed with terminal cancer. But the lecture he gave—"Really Achieving Your Childhood Dreams"—wasn't about dying. It was about the importance of overcoming obstacles, of enabling the dreams of others, of seizing every moment (because "time is all you have . . . and you may find one day that you have less than you think"). It was a summation of everything Randy had come to believe. It was about living. In this book, Randy Pausch has combined the humor, inspiration and intelligence that made his lecture such a phenomenon and given it an indelible form. It is a book that will be shared for generations to come.

The good things about you, earth, and your loved ones, should not be mired in obscurity and ambiguity, because of the ignorance of yourself or someone else. I know what it's like to be led by nebulous people off a proverbial cliff, towards a bad habit, or worse. You can be the you, you actually want to be. You can live uninfluenced by people who could care less if whether or not you have a roof over your head or a pillow to lay it on. Freedom is for you. Every human has a need to become self-actualized. Self-actualization is the realization of your potential and abilities. You may not be where you want to be in life because someone planted a bad seed in your mind and told you that you couldn't achieve your dreams or desires. Desires are eternal. Eternity in this context refers to the divine or cosmic. Your wants don't die, you just may have given up on them. And you giving up on your desires isn't necessarily all your fault. I want to help you break out of the shame of living in a way that is inauthentic. Live well but more than that, live period. When you are empowered to generate health and purpose that is what will materialize in your life. Allow yourself to be empowered. Think better, do better, believe better, be better. Some of the nouns in your life are literally either demons or the devil himself. Nefarious forces don't want you to have a revelation. They want you to be a loser like them. That's why certain nouns knock you down or undermine you whenever you [try to] accomplish something great with yourself. They don't want to see you win. They don't want you to win because they know you can win, and that type of winning will never happen for them in a validating way. The good in you and in your life is more bountiful than the bad, but certain nouns may be amplifying the bad in your life and making it worse. Get your mind right. You only receive what you believe you are worthy of receiving. Believe you are worthy of receiving joy, happiness, promotions, support, love, care, meaning, and purpose. Get and stay around positivity and affirm the good in your life. Go against the people, places, and things that don't want you to live. Learn how to have and proliferate a meaningful life for yourself.

The Life You Choose to Live A.R.Ribeiro The reality that everyone experiences is first and foremost a projection of their own consciousness. The external world accurately reflects what is accepted internally as truth. The way each person sees themselves determines both the circumstances that arise and the limits and possibilities that appear along the way. Understanding this leads to an essential revelation: transforming the world around you requires, first and foremost, an inner transformation. Thoughts are not mere abstractions, but creative forces that shape experience. Every idea held in the mind has the potential to become reality, and the conscious choice of elevated thoughts can create a more harmonious existence. Life does not respond to superficial desires, but rather to what is assumed to be true within. The firm conviction of a state of well-being, prosperity and fulfillment paves the way for its realization. Recognizing the supreme force present in everything and understanding one's own role in creating reality makes genuine transformation possible. Suffering and difficulties are not immutable determinants, but reflections of beliefs and internal patterns that can be reconfigured. What today seems unattainable already exists as potential, just waiting for the willingness to be recognized and manifested. All authentic change begins with awareness. Clinging to automatic patterns keeps the same experiences repeating, while careful observation and conscious choice enable the transition to higher states of existence. Aligning yourself emotionally with what you want to experience is essential to making this new reality tangible. The external world responds faithfully to what you cultivate internally, confirming that everything you feel to be true will eventually manifest. Freedom arises when you understand that the past does not limit the possibilities of the present. The desired transformation occurs the moment you abandon identification with restrictive beliefs and recognize that consciousness is the source of all experiences. This understanding leads to a new perspective, in which each individual becomes the author of their own existence, shaping every aspect of life as they sustain their inner vision. A mind disciplined to stay focused on what one really wants becomes a powerful instrument of creation. Persistent thought about an ideal generates a natural synchronization between desire and reality. Clarity of purpose facilitates manifestation, as doubt and insecurity only dissipate creative energy. When conviction strengthens, life reorganizes itself to reflect this inner certainty. Reality is neither fixed nor imposed by uncontrollable external forces. It continually adjusts to what remains the focus of attention and emotion. Abandoning illusory judgments and divisions makes room for the authentic experience of one's own creative essence. The world is transformed as the mind is transformed, because everything that is experienced is a direct result of what is cultivated within. A.R.Ribeiro.

Irrational Kindness! Kevin Williams 2020-12-01 "A thoughtful and fresh perspective on life's compassionate journey to success. Irrational Kindness is powerful, provocative, and palatable." —Linda Cash, former Vice President, Quality and New Model Launch Program at Ford Motor Company This work from a fast food entrepreneur and rare triple-franchisee Kevin Williams was written as part-employee handbook, part-operating manual for life. Irrational Kindness flips traditional wisdom on its head and gives a different lens through which to look at life. Often the idea of being irrational is smeared with negative connotations. It can sound illogical, senseless, unjustifiable, or groundless. It may even represent ludicrous and mad behavior! But Kevin Williams argues that being irrational can be just the opposite. And it is the most positive, inspiring, and empowering way to be. Being irrational has to do with thinking outside the box—way outside. It has to do with viewing life as a journey and still being willing to reverse the route, shake things up, or flip the map upside down. Why? Not just to be different, but to make a difference. Irrational Kindness can serve as a harmonious reminder that one's hopes and dreams do not have to be derailed—not by their fears, their pasts, or by people who make them feel like they have to know everything to be successful, or even just to get started. Throughout its pages, Kevin provides the inspiration everyone needs to favor understanding over being understood and prioritize kindness—toward themselves as well as others—over everything. "This book is a needed and timely reminder to pause and give Kindness a platform to change the world around you." —Princess Moon, Podcast Artist & Encourager of People
